Brief Summary

Provide a brief summary (preferably no more than 2 or 3 paragraphs) of this regulatory change (i.e., new regulation, amendments to an existing regulation, or repeal of an existing regulation). Alert the reader to all substantive matters. If applicable, generally describe the existing regulation.

Existing regulations for hunting foxes in Virginia combine gray fox and red fox, providing the same hunting seasons for both species. Population trend data for gray foxes over the past few decades indicates a significant decline in gray fox populations, and separating the gray fox and red fox hunting seasons is warranted to reduce human-induced mortality. The regulation amendments would separate the gray fox and red fox hunting seasons and reduce the gray fox hunting season. Other amendments would establish a daily bag limit for gray foxes and require that gray foxes be causing damage to property or pose a threat to human health or safety before a landowner may kill or have killed a gray fox on land they own. No regulatory amendments are proposed for the hunting of red foxes in Virginia.

Mandate and Impetus

Identify the mandate for this regulatory change, and any other impetus that specifically prompted its initiation (e.g., new or modified mandate, internal staff review, petition for rulemaking, periodic review, or board decision). For purposes of executive branch review, "mandate" has the same meaning as defined in the ORM procedures, "a directive from the General Assembly, the federal government, or a court that requires that a regulation be promulgated, amended, or repealed in whole or part."

The impetus for this regulatory amendment is the Board's biennial periodic review of its hunting, trapping, and wildlife-related regulations. Internal staff review, wildlife management and recreation goals, and consideration of public input through the Board's regulation review and amendment process deemed these amendments advisable.
